Contents

List of abbreviations 7
Preface 9

PART ONE – Towards an Idea of Interpersonal stage in Scientific Discourse

Chapter I. Discourse and Text in Linguistic Studies 15
1. Introduction – Defining discourse 15
1.1. Structuralist approach to discourse 16
1.2. Discourse as functions – the functionalist approach . . 19
1.2.1. Discourse as utterances and functions 20
1.2.2. The contribution of Énonciation theory to the understanding of discourse 22
1.3. The Communicative approach to language – unifying the structuralist – functionalist opposition 24
1.4. Discourse as social interaction – a principle uniting many approaches to language 28
1.5. Discourse and discourses 31
2. Towards a definition of text 33
2.1. Discourse vs. text. Difference-based definitions 33
2.2. Metaphors for text and discourse 38
2.3. Discourse and text – processes or products 42
2.4. Cohesion and coherence 44
2.5. Chapter conclusions 47

Chapter II. Defining the Concept of Interpersonal Stage in the Written Discourse 49
1. Semantics, syntax and pragmatics 49
1.1. Basic concepts of pragmatics relevant to the present study 50
1.2. Denotation and reference 53
1.3. Interaction in academic writing 55
2. Rhetoric -Verbal art as performance 56
2.1. The SELF in the written discourse 57

2.2. Where the self is missing – The Implying lexical structures 58
3. The actors on the stage – Grammatical and pragmatic implications 60
3.1. Semantics of the stage – Grammatical person 60
3.2. Pragmatics of the stage – Pragmatic person 62
3.3. The linguistic exponents of communication act participants 64
4. The interpersonal stage – theoretical considerations . . . 67
4.1. The Performance Stage – Towards a model of analysis 69
4.2. The Persuasion Stage – Towards a model of analysis . 70

PART TWO – In Search of the Participant Roles on the Interpersonal Stage in Academic Discourse

Chapter III. The Performance Stage 77
1. The addressee 77
1.1. The personal pronoun we 78
1.2. The personal pronoun you 81
1.3. Indefinite and demonstrative pronouns 89
2. The addresser 91
2.1. The personal pronouns – we versus I 91
2.2. The nominal pointing items 94
3. Conclusion 96

Chapter IV. The Persuasion Stage 99
1. Personal pronouns 99
1.1. The personal pronoun we 100
1.2. The personal pronoun we in discourse patterns . . . 122
1.3. The indefinite pronoun one versus the personal pronoun you 125
1.4. The personal pronoun I 129
2. The Interpersonal Stage – Concluding remarks 139

References 141
Streszczenie 149